

Helping Nonprofits Become Profitable - A Quality for Life™ Video Story

As you connect and collaborate with member units, you have likely come across amazing stories of how quality makes a positive impact on the world. This story comes from ASQ member Michael McDermott, Seattle, Wash., who works for the organization NISH. His work allows him to offer his quality services to nonprofit organizations to help make them profitable. View the video.

New Content to Help Your Members Through a Career Transition

ASQ has created a series of career-focused podcasts to explore the challenges facing quality professionals who are transitioning their quality skills to a new industry. Now available, the third and final podcast in the series features ASQ member Allen Wong, who discusses the value of ASQ certifications, how it benefits potential employees and employers, and what certifications can be applied to specific industries. The podcasts can be located in the resources section of the ASQ Career Center Web site.